

Acknowledgement Agreement for Article Submission

From here forward case studies, editorials, tutorials and best practices will be referred to as "Articles."

1. You acknowledge that the said article submitted does not violate or infringe any copyright and is not company proprietary. This also applies to images, photographs and other graphical elements included in the article. You also acknowledge that the Article does not violate ITAR or any other export laws or regulations.
2. You acknowledge that the said article is your own work and does not violate any intellectual property rights.
3. You acknowledge that the said article does not criticize a company's product. Articles of this kind and those that are deemed blatant advertisements of products will not be considered for posting.
4. You acknowledge that no other agreements or promises have been made either verbally or electronically by members of the ADL Initiative that differ from this agreement. No amendments or waivers may be made to this agreement.
5. You acknowledge that the ADL Initiative shall give no monetary compensation for the said article.
6. You acknowledge that the ADL Initiative reserves the right to modify information provided by any individual on the basis of consistency, grammar, spelling and/or the technical errors associated with the misuse of ADL terminology. (For example, SCORM Compliant should be referenced as SCORM Conformant.) As author you have the right to review final changes and/or withdraw submission based on these changes.
7. You acknowledge that the ADL Initiative cannot be held liable for any lost revenue, profit or data, or for direct, indirect, special, consequential, incidental or punitive damages, however caused and regardless of the theory of liability, arising out of the posting of the said article.
8. You acknowledge that at any time the ADL Initiative has the right to modify this agreement.
9. You acknowledge that the ADL Initiative does not own or take ownership of any article submitted. All rights to the article belong to the author.
10. You acknowledge that you have the right to withdraw* the said article at anytime after posting by stating your wishes in writing by either fax (814-269-6400) or by mail to:
